Q. 1-A) Read the following extract and answer the questions given below :

(11)

During a holiday break, Dell's parents told him they were concerned about his grades. "If you want to start a business, do it after you get your degree", his father pleaded.

Dell agreed, but back in college he felt the opportunity of a lifetime was passing him by. "I couldn't bear to miss this chance," he says. After one month he started selling computers again - with a vengeance.

The quarter he shared with two roommates was in chaos – boxes piled high, computer boards and tools scattered around. One day his roommates heaped all his equipment into a pile, preventing Dell from entering his room. It was time to come to grip with the magnitude of what he had created. The business was now grossing more than $50,000 a month.

Dell confessed to his parents that he was still in the computer business. They wanted to know how his classes were going.

"I have to quit college" he replied. "I want to start my own company".

"What exactly is it that you want to do?" asked his dad.

"Compete with IBM", he answered simply.

Compete with IBM? Now his parents were really worried. But no matter what they said, Dell insisted. So they made a deal: over summer vacation he would try to launch a computer company. If he did not succeed, it would be back to university. Dell risked all his savings and incorporated Dell Computer Corp on May 3, 1984. He was 19.

Under the deadline, his pace was frantic. He rented a one room office on a month-to-month lease and hired his first employee, a 28-year-old manager to handle finance and administration. For advertising, he grabbed an empty box and on the back sketched the first ad for Dell Computer. A friend copied it onto paper and took it to the newspaper.

1. What daring decision did Michael Dell take? (01)
2. How did Dell display the first ad of his company? (02)
3. Why did Dell's father dislike his starting of a business? (02)
4. Why do you think that after a month Dell started selling computers again with a vengeance? (02)
5. Do as directed:
 - (a) "Compete with IBM," he answered simply. (01)
(Rewrite the sentence using the Noun form of the underlined word)
 - (b) Dell risked all his savings and incorporated Dell Computer Corp on May 3, 1984. (01)
(Rewrite as a simple sentence)
 - (c) One day his roommates heaped all his equipment into a pile. (01)
(Change the Voice)
6. Give the Noun forms of:
 - (a) agree (b) enter (01)

- Q. 1-B) Do as Directed (06)
- 1) In _____ last decade the hype was for BRICS, _____ acronym for Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa. (01)
(Fill in the blanks with suitable articles)
 - 2) The Minimum Wage Act came _____ effect in 1948 and has remained the bedrock _____ workers' right. (01)
(Use proper prepositions)
 - 3) "Is winning awards important for you?" asked the interviewer. "They are immaterial for me," said the actor. (02)
(Change into indirect speech)
 - 4) They love its cities. They love its villages. (01)
(Use Not only.....but also)
 - 5) He turned his face towards the village and sat down. (01)
(Rewrite using the present participle of the underlined word)

Q. 2) Read the following poem and answer the questions given below: (04)

*If you accept counsel without getting sore
And re-assess yourself in the light thereof
If you pledge not to be obstinate any more
And meet others without any frown or scoff.
You may be the person I am looking for.*

*If you have the will to live and courage to die
You are a beacon-light for people far and wide
If you ignore the jeers and, thus, expose the lie
'That virtue and success do not go side by side'.
You are the person I am looking for.*

1. What advice does the poet give you about accepting counsel? (01)
2. Would you describe the poet as a social reformer? How? (01)
3. Name and explain the figure of speech - "If you have the will to live and courage to die". (01)
4. Pick out the line in which the poet exposes a false belief. (01)

Q. 3) Read the following extract. (04)

Now listen! In the country, close by the high road, stood a farmhouse; perhaps you have passed by and seen it yourself. There was a little flower garden with painted wooden palings in front of it; close by was a ditch, on its fresh green bank grew a little daisy; the sun shone as warmly and brightly upon it as on the magnificent garden flowers, and therefore it thrived well. One morning it had quite opened, and its little snow-white petals stood round the yellow centre, like the rays of the sun. It did not mind that nobody saw it in the grass, and that it was a poor despised flower; on the contrary, it was quite happy, and turned towards the sun, looking upward and listening to the song of the lark high up in the air.

The little daisy was as happy as if the day had been a great holiday, but it was only Monday. All the children were at school, and while they were sitting on the forms and learning their lessons, it sat on its thin green stalk and learnt from the sun and from its surroundings how kind God is, and it rejoiced that the song of the little lark expressed so sweetly and distinctly its own feelings. With a sort of reverence the daisy looked up to the bird that could fly and sing, but it did not feel envious. "I can see and hear," it thought; "the sun shines upon me, and the forest kisses me. How rich I am!"

Convert the given extract into a narration. Imagine that the little daisy is narrating.

At last the date of my deliverance drew near. I went round the village saying good-bye to the simple folk who had become my friends. As I entered the post office, the postmaster presented me with a telegram-an urgent invitation to meet the publisher. I took it straight away and showed it, without a word, to John Angus.

The novel I had thrown away was chosen by the Book Society, dramatized and serialized, translated into 19 languages, bought by Hollywood. It has sold, to date, some three million copies. It altered my life radically, beyond my wildest dreams... and all because of a timely lesson in the grace of perseverance.

But that lesson goes deeper still. Today, when the air resounds with shrill defeatist cries, when half our stricken world is wailing in discouragement: "What is the use... to recollect it. The door is wide open to darkness and despair. The way to close that door is to go on doing whatever job we are doing and to finish it.

Q. 3) Read the following extract. (04)

Shortly after this a girl came into the garden, with a large sharp knife. She went to the tulips and began cutting them off, one after another. "Ugh!" sighed the daisy, "that is terrible; now they are done for."

The girl carried the tulips away. The daisy was glad that it was outside, and only a small flower—it felt very grateful. At sunset it folded its petals, and fell asleep, and dreamt all night of the sun and the little bird.

On the following morning, when the flower once more stretched forth its tender petals, like little arms, towards the air and light, the daisy recognised the bird's voice, but what it sang sounded so sad. Indeed the poor bird had good reason to be sad, for it had been caught and put into a cage close by the open window. It sang of the happy days when it could merrily fly about, of fresh green corn in the fields, and of the time when it could soar almost up to the clouds. The poor lark was most unhappy as a prisoner in a cage. The little daisy would have liked so much to help it, but what could be done? Indeed, that was very difficult for such a small flower to find out. It entirely forgot how beautiful everything around it was, how warmly the sun was shining, and how splendidly white its own petals were. It could only think of the poor captive bird, for which it could do nothing. Then two little boys came out of the garden; one of them had a large sharp knife, like that with which the girl had cut the tulips. They came straight towards the little daisy, which could not understand what they wanted.

Imagine that the daisy and the lark are having a conversation. Write the conversation that takes place between the daisy and the lark. (About 8 sentences).
